Dorothy Dix Talks

THE COMPLETE ANGLER
By DOROTHY DIX
The World's Highest Paid Woman Writer

A GIRL of sixteen writes me that she is very much in love with a young doctor, and she wants to know whether she shall disclose the state of her affections to him or not. She says that she has never made love to her, but that she can tell that he is madly devoted to her by the look in his eyes, and she is afraid that if she does not let him know that she loves him he will wander off after some other girl.

It is to laugh and it is to cry, to read such a letter. Poor little girl, fisher, starting out to angle for masculine hearts before she understands the first principle of the art, or even what bait to use on her hook! No wonder that she doesn't catch anything, or get even a nibble of sentiment out of her young man, or that she is driven to imagining that he is filled with unutterable longings instead of hearing them expressed viva voce!

Of course there is no use in telling sweet sixteen that she is too young to know what love really is, because it is only at that age that we believe that we are in the throes of a deathless and unchanging passion. After we have experienced several deathless and unchanging passions for different individuals, we begin to discount our emotions.

Nor is there any use in telling a young girl that no woman in the world has ever been wise enough, or psychic enough, to read what is in man's eyes or tell from the way he looks at her what he really thinks of her. Two things bar her from this knowledge. One is that when a woman looks in a man's eyes she sees only what she wants to see. They become a mirror that reflects her own desires. The other thing is that the light that lies in a man's eyes lies, and lies, AND lies.

Still less is there any use in telling a girl that men are not bashful about asking for what they want, and that no man who really loves a woman keeps silent about it. The John Aldens who are afraid to do their courting are pretty figures in poetry, but they do not exist in real life. The minute a man feels that some particular girl is the only girl in the world for him, he hastens to impart the glad information to her, and he keeps on monologuing about it until she shuts off his flow of oratory on the subject by accompanying him to the altar.

But perhaps sweet sixteen will listen to the reiteration of old bromide truth that nature has made man the pursuer, and implanted in his breast a horror of being pursued, and that makes it a fatal thing for a woman to take the initiative in love making. This is why the women who wear their hearts on their sleeves never have any man troubling to pick them off, and why women who are openly husband hunters never bring down their quarry.

The peach that a man craves is the one that hangs highest on the tree, not the over ripe one that is ready to drop into his mouth. The bird that he stalks through tireless days and nights is the weary one that is always on the wing, not the tame barn fowl that is ready to come and eat out of his hand at his first pipe. And the woman that he wants most is the woman who wants him least. This is a constitutional peculiarity of man. Thus he is built, and there is no use in arguing with the specifications.

For this reason in the love gambit between sexes woman's one best bet is always being uncertain, coy, and hard to please. Naturally she must first pique a man's interest in her by her good looks, or her charm of manner, or her intelligence of conversation. Even the modest violet must have astuteness enough to grow in a man's pathway so he cannot fail to see it, if it ever hopes to adorn his buttonhole. But having waked a man up to the perception that she is easy on the eyes to look at, and agreeable to talk to, the girl's next play is to lie low and stimulate indifference.

Let her make the man feel that she regards him as merely one among those also present, pleasant enough, but nothing to set a girl crazy.

Above all, let her make him feel that while she is not averse to matrimony, if the Prince should happen along, still she does not regard matrimony as the be-all of a woman's life, and that she is not to be had for the asking.

This is why a girl who knows how to play the love game always keeps a man guessing. She never comes out and tells him flat footed that she loves with the love of a dog that nothing he could do would drive him. On the contrary she makes him feel that her affection for him is a beautiful and fragile plant that must continually watch and cherish to keep alive. Nor does she write him seven letters to his one so that he feels that she doesn't have to bother to answer, anyway. On the contrary, she forbears to reply to a letter occasionally, and he telegraphs to find out why.

She can't call him up on the telephone to find out why he doesn't come to see her, and he comes on her doorstep because she has aroused his fighting blood. He is determined to make her presence, or die in the attempt. She is in no hurry to name the wedding day, and that makes him so afraid of losing her that he entreates her to elope.

Undoubtedly one of the reasons why there is a falling off in marriage is because girls are too willing. They are too easy to win, and worst of all, their fathers and mothers show too plainly that they are eager to wish their daughters off on somebody else to support.

In the old days when parents had sense to lock their daughters up in the donjon tower to keep them from their suitors, there were no old maids. A man will risk his life climbing up to get the maiden that he is forbidden to marry, but he will break his neck trying to get away from the girl who is trying to marry him.

The eternal excuse that married men make for the indifference with which they treat their wives is, that no one chases a street car after he has caught it. The conjugal kiss is dust and ashes on a man's lips when it becomes a daily custom instead of a stolen joy. The touch of a wife's hand brings no thrill when it has become part of the household machine.

ery. He takes no trouble to preserve the love that he knows he can't lose. And if this is true after marriage, how infinitely more true is it before marriage! And what an unspeakable blunder the girl makes who makes a free present of all of the treasures of her heart to a man before he ever asks for the gift, instead of keeping him wondering what is in that marvelous casket until he pays the price of a wedding ring for the privilege of owning it.

Don't do it, girls. Let men do the love making. Don't throw yourself at a man's head. Remember men are the artful dodgers.

PAN-PACIFIC CLUB IS FORMED IN FRISCO

As a result of the broad Pan-Pacific trade movement in this city the Pan-Pacific club of San Francisco, says the San Francisco Call, has been organized with the following officers and directors:

President, W. H. Hammer (president Foreign Trade club), first vice president, E. K. Lowe (secretary Chinese chamber of commerce); second vice president, H. Stephenson Smith (New Zealand trade representative); secretary, William E. Hague; treasurer, C. B. Perkins; directors, F. S. Digby of Australia, H. K. Watanabe (secretary Japanese chamber of commerce), Dr. P. de Obarrio (consul Costa Rica), Charles Holloway, Jr. (Hundred Per Cent club), L. H. Hyman (Holland and Java chamber of commerce), Leo Lebebaum (treasurer Tourist Association of Central California), and David Lee (president Korean National association).

These, together with the following advisory board elected from those who have shown interest in the Pan-Pacific movement, will form the governing board: Mayor James Rolph, Jr. (San Francisco and Australasia), Henry T. Scott (San Francisco bay), John H. Rosseter (South America and the Orient), Captain Robert Dollar (the Pacific), W. H. Avery (China, Japan and the Philippines), F. J. McKen (Pacific coast and Alaska), Charles S. Fee (Transcontinental railways), and W. H. Sallander (Hawaii).

One of the chief objects of the new club is to cooperate with the Pan-Pacific Union in inducing all of the countries of the Pacific to work together to make the advantages of Pacific lands better known to the world and to foster Pan-Pacific and inter-Pacific trade.

The organization was effected at a luncheon given by Alexander Humel Ford, secretary of the Pan-Pacific Union, at which H. W. Burhaus, Democratic publicity director, was guest of honor.

HILO IS THREATENED WITH POWER SHORTAGE

Again Hilo is threatened with a shortage of power for the manufacture of ice and power for running machinery. Manager Plankington of the Hilo Electric is in Honolulu in the endeavor to make arrangements for the securing of ice for his trade, and in the meantime, there is an insufficiency being manufactured here to supply the house trade.

That the lack of oil for fuel would soon become so acute as to compel the company to change the furnace to a coal burner. That in this case there will be a complete shut-down of the plant for two or three days, is predicted by those who are supposed to know the conditions.

If this should come to pass, there will be a hardship in our households that must be met with a resignation to a condition over which no one has power, not even the Hilo Electric Power Co.—Hilo Post.

SCHOFIELD AFFAIR IS GET-ACQUAINTED STUNT

The big Red Cross entertainment at Schofield Barracks next Saturday night is not to be a military affair alone. Those in charge of it today asked that emphasis be laid on the fact that all the civilian population of the island is wanted at the entertainment. In fact, it is looked on as a big get-acquainted stunt for the military and civilian folk. Plans are moving apace for the show, it is stated, and all will be ready for the opening number.

"What made Miss Oldgirl decide to become a war nurse?" "Well, she has been a candidate for matrimony for a good many years, and somebody told her that the men in the trenches are desperate enough for anything."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

GETS 800 GRAPEFRUIT FROM JUST FOUR TREES

Raymond C. Brown, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, had on his desk this morning samples of grapefruit grown in the yard of his home in Manoa valley. The fruit was of the Florida variety, large and luscious. He has four trees bearing about 800 grapefruit and says they seem to thrive in this climate. He isn't sure whether he will go into the grapefruit raising business some day or not, he says. As yet it is only a hobby, he adds.

"Well, Rastus, I hear you are working again. What business are you engaged in?" "I've done be engaged in de mining business, sah." "What kind of mining are you doing, gold, silver or diamond?" "I've kalsomining, sah."—Comus.

CITY PURCHASER QUESTION TO BE DISCUSSED AGAIN

Passing the financial budget for the months of October, November and December, discussing and taking action on the reports of the purchasing agent department and appointment or re-appointment of a park superintendent will be the principal items of business at a meeting of the board of supervisors tonight.

The budget will be given a third reading and will probably pass as it stands. If the mayor signs it immediately after it will become operative to include the salaries for the first part of this month.

Action on the reports regarding the purchasing agent department will probably be taken. Supervisor McClellan, who submitted the majority report favoring the abolishment of the department some time ago, still believes that his recommendation is for the best while Supervisor Hollinger who submitted a minority report favoring the readjustment of the department and the appointment of a new man also declares that he will stand by his guns. The other supervisors are taking time to study the situation before expressing an opinion.

While it has been rumored about the city for some time that A. K. Vierra will be reappointed to the position of parks superintendent, and that John Harkness's name will be main on the table for good, none of the members of the "efficiency party" will say what course of action is contemplated. The present milk inspector, Lot K. Lane, and the present police inspector, Edward Marino, will probably be reappointed. The question of the Nuuanu water supply, minor resolutions, and the payrolls will also come up.

Woman Needs All Her Strength

Keeping house is hard enough when well. The woman who has a bad back, blue, nervous spells, dizzy headaches and kidney or bladder troubles, has a hard lot, for the family cares and tasks never let up.

Probably it's all the result of kidney trouble and not the much feared "woman's weakness." Strengthen the kidneys with Doan's Backache Kidney Pills, used and recommended by women the world over. They are just as harmless as they are effective and may be used for children with weak kidneys, too.

"When Your Back is Lame—Remember the Name." DOAN'S BACKACHE KIDNEY PILLS. Sold by all druggists at 50c a box (six boxes $2.50), or mailed on receipt of price by the Hollister Drug Co., or Benson, Smith & Co., agents for the Hawaiian Islands.
